

Peace is Possible

(Original)

Jessica Jubrail

(Age 14, Jordan)

Rosary school - Marj Elhamam, Amman

Many people consider spreading peace around the world as an impossible dream that they gave up on, so it is youths' responsibly to create a peaceful and calm future. Peace is a feeling of security and the acceptance of others as not everybody grew up in the same family atmosphere. In this essay I will discuss why peace can make the world a better place.

Youth have creative and unique ideas that could contribute in having peaceful future generations. We could spread peace in many ways which include helping others in usual, every-day tasks like helping your neighbor with carrying their groceries, or cutting their backyard grass, as a little bit of help could make a great impact on the world.

Young people have kind and pure hearts as when I was young, I used to hear about poverty or people with disabilities as it always made me cry and think "Why do I deserve to have food to eat when others are starving?". So, charity and voluntary work can make a positive impact as people could donate money to an orphan charity or donate food and blankets to counties with poverty.

Youth can also promote peace by spreading it over social media, as students could support people that have different cultures and learn more about other ethnicities, by doing this youth help stop wars between countries as they would feel respected by each other.

Everyone has their own point of view in life, so whenever there is a problem, people only see what happened in their perspective which could lead misunderstandings and disputes. So, people should learn to view situations in different perspectives in order to fully understand each other.

In conclusion, it is easy to imagine a world with peace in it but it can be hard to make one. Every kid, teenager and adult has a role to fill in spreading peace. Finally, I wish that my dream of having a world with peace in it will be fulfilled as soon as possible.